

We are cancer, but we can also be doctors

We were born on this beautiful and unique planet, and have evolved over millions of years to become the leader of all beings. It is this kind Mother Earth who has raised us up, but we have done irreversible damage to her in the past hundred years.

The impact of humans on the environment is an often discussed issue. You can frequently see on the internet that the temperature of the earth continues to warm, the water bodies continue to be polluted, and a large areas of dense forests have turned into deserts.

Whenever we see such a situation, we will feel as sad as seeing our mother suffering. We are born from the Mother Earth, so we have this obligation to protect the earth and we must to protect the environment. If we not, we will gradually die out, just like the previous creatures that were extinct due to human damage to the environment. So it is extremely necessary to protect out environment.

Then measures should we take to protect out environment? Probably we can embark on the following three aspects. The easiest thing we can do is that when leaving home, turn off all power except the necessary items such as the refrigerator. Which would help to reduce the power consumption, and would be helpful to curb global warming if most of us do that. Except that method we should also actively implement waste classification. To make our environment cleaner, we need more people to join us. And we can do more that we can saving paper such as printing double-side paper. The more we save the less trees would be cut down, and eventually we can contribute to the resurgence the dense forest.

Although our damage to the earth in the past centuries is consider as a cancer of the earth, I believe that as long as each of us work together, we can become the earth's doctor and rejuvenate the Mother Earth.
